CORNELIUS LANSING HAYS, JR.

I enlisted in the U. S. Naval Reserve in September 1940. Took a course on the old U.S.S. Vincennes (which now adds to the rust of Iron Bottom Bay off Guadalcanal), during the latter part of November and December 1940. In 1941, March 15th, I entered midshipman school at U.S.S. Illinois, later changed to U.S.S. Prairie State. I took the engineering course against my will and better judgment and on June 6, 1941, was commissioned an ensign, qualified for engineering duty and - because I had been a good boy, I presume, was ordered to inactive duty. Subsequently I was ordered to report on October 1 to Commandant 5th Naval District, Norfolk, for duty with the In-Shore Patrol. I served on a World War I sub-chaser and subsequently was transferred to a mine sweeper as a deck officer, standing watches sweeping mines. After approximately one and a half months of mine sweeping I was transferred to one of Henry Ford's brain children of World War I, an Eagle boat bearing the designation Eagle No. 19. I became engineering officer in that ship from December 1941, prior to Pearl Harbor until the Fall of 1943.

While on that ship we patrolled off the Atlantic Coast, which was alive with enemy submarines. At times we had as many as five or six subs in our patrol area. Later we did convoy duty and subsequently we became a training ship operating in Florida Straits out of Key West, teaching, in six easy lessons, how to catch submarines. On about October, 1942, I was commissioned a Lieutenant Junior Grade and a year later was commissioned a full Lieutenant.

In the Fall of 1943 I received orders for 15 days leave to the Submarine Chaser Training center in Miami. There I had shore duty in school for deck officers and subsequently a school covering destroyer engineering. Part of that engineering training included a month's study of turbo-electric drive at General Electric, Syracuse, N.Y. After 7 or 8 weeks of waiting for orders in Miami during the Spring of 1944 I was ordered to an amphibian training base at Little Creek, Va.

At Little Creek, Va. I was given a choice of engineering duty with Diesel engines or deck duty. Having had two years of engineering in steam, I took deck duty and attended school for LSM officers. Subsequently I was ordered to USS LSM 271 then building at Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co., Port Newark, N. J., which took me home to New York.

After a month for outfitting and commissioning we proceeded to San Diego via Norfolk, Key West and the Canal, and weathered a full hurricane in Key West.

After another shake-down cruise out of San Diego we proceeded to Pearl Harbor, to Guadalcanal to pick up marines, thence to Okinawa via Ulithi. We arrived at Okinawa on April Fool's Day, worked like hell until the war was over, and then proceeded to continue to work at the same rate. We made a trip up to Japan after being assigned to mine forces for use as a mine layer. I was commissioned a Lieutenant Commander on October 1, 1945, and on Thanksgiving Day of 1945 received my orders, was relieved as commanding officer, and returned to the States via Pearl Harbor and San Francisco, arriving in New York December 27, 1945.

While we were in Okinawa we met with the usual Kamikaze (Divine Wind) and about half a dozen typhoons - another name for a hurricane and a helluva high wind.

That, in brief, is my Navy Career, for what it is worth.
